There are 155 minor songs in the 1991 edition of The Sacred Harp (including the one in the Rudiments). Of those, only 21 lack the Fa-6.

Most of the anthems in the minor have been left out of this list, and finding the presence or absence of the 6th therein has been left as an exercise for the student ;-)

If "yes" appears in a column, it means that the Fa-6 appears in that part. The composer of 313b, e.g., loves to hear it with raised 6ths! (The "no" in 313b Cobb for the alto means altos should sing Fa-1 on C — found at the word "thoughts" in vs. 1 — instead of the Fa-6 printed in their part.)

If "yes" appears in the Accidental column, it means that an accidental is present in the song but that note should be sung as if the accidental were not there. Notice that every single one is an attempt to do what B. F. White wrote about in his newspaper.

Granville was composed throughout in the modern minor which uses lowered 6ths. This makes it very difficult for Sacred Harp singers, used to the intervals of the older minor scale, to sing it. They can learn to do it but should be aware of what has happened to their Fa-6 when they do, so that it is a deliberate act, not an unconscious one.*
